

PREMISE PARADIGMATICE ALE ACȚIUNII ȘTIINȚELOR ADMINISTRATIVE APLICATE ÎN CADRUL SOCIETĂȚII OCCIDENTALE: CULTURĂ ȘI ORDINE PARTICIPATIVĂ
PARADIGMATIC PREMISES OF THE ADMINISTRATIVE SCIENCES ACTIONS APPLIED IN WESTERN SOCIETY: CULTURE AND PARTICIPATIVE AGENDA

Regis ROMAN

Catedra de Științe Politice și Administrative, Facultatea de Științe Umaniste, Politice și Administrative, Universitatea de Vest „Vasile Goldiș” din Arad

Tel: 0040-257-282324

E-mail: regis_roman@yahoo.com

ABSTRACT

There is a major conflict regarding the citizen's role as an actor of the society. Political sociology suggests, according to its researches, also, an analysis of the patterns influencing the social and political structure. Methodological individualism focuses on the individual as the center of its researches. It stands for an entire complex of situations, opportunities and burdens exercising social interactions and influencing the ways in which information is discerned and the political decision made. Because the citizen is placed in the very center of the researches, actions and social interactions, political sociology uses multiple arguments based on the rational choice theory or arguments based on behavioral and cognitive psychology.

Key words: democracy, political decision making process, public administration, public policy

Citeste articolul

