ABSTRACT

Structural funds are financial instruments, administered by the European Commission, aiming to help member states by investing in education, agriculture, infrastructure and creating mechanisms for developing the rural regions. This paper tries to argue how important are structural funds for Romania, a country which has to reduce the severe discrepancies between itself and other member states of the EU. Cluj County is a very good example in this case because its accelerated development in the last few years is mainly due to the insertion of the structural funds.

Key words: structural funds, Cluj County, economic development, development strategy.
